Child-Rearing Exemption for National Pension Premiums is Starting!

From October 1, there will be a new child-rearing exemption for national pension premiums.

Applications may be submitted by parents (or guardians) who are enrolled in Category 1 of the National Pension System and are raising a child under the age of one. Once your application is approved, your National Pension premiums will be waived from the month you begin raising your child through the month preceding the child's first birthday. (This does not apply until September 2026.)

Three conditions

- The child's birthday must be on or after November 2025.
- The parent-child relationship continues.
- Lives at the same address as the child.

Applications can be submitted starting October 1 at the Pension Section of the Citizen Services Division.

* If the parent-child relationship cannot be verified through a Japanese family register, you will need a certificate issued by a government agency in your home country that confirms the parent-child relationship, along with a Japanese translation of that certificate.
